Brazilian Igor Toribio (age 8) attends Canadian International School of Beijing with his brother Nicolas (13). Father Alexandre is a pilot; mother Helga is a translator. The family live close to Chaoyang Park, and have been in Beijing for the past eight years, moving here to have the opportunity to explore a different culture. Igor says he likes all subjects at school; Helga tells us he is especially good at art and performing. It's easy to see at the photo shoot: he mugs and grins for the camera, making the process a breeze. His favorite teacher is his homeroom teacher, Ms. Laura Creamer. Photo by Dave's Studio

Hybrid Curriculum Spotlight: Chinese Thread at Keystone Academy

What are the strengths of the Hybrid Curriculum with regard to Chinese Thread classes?

In order to successfully teach Chinese language, wushu and other Chinese arts classes are very important. They deepen language acquisition and allow for cultural immersion. When teaching wushu, we go beyond the movements, building Chinese vocabulary as students learn new characters, their meanings, and various uses. The virtues and philosophies that are part of wushu are also part of the school's values. Chinese Thread is important as it adds value to the child's overall experience in the school and China. -Mao Xiaokun wushu teacher at Keystone Academy

What was the most interesting project you worked on this year?

This is my first time learning wushu. It's fun, but sometimes difficult. We learn movements and postures, and at the end of the year, we are videoed doing everything we've learned so far. Practicing is my personal project; getting the really difficult movements to feel natural by repeating them again again. -Chloe Kayla Spadafora, Grade 4

Hybrid Curriculum

Schools with a blended curriculum don't fit neatly into any one category. Generally, they take the best of Chinese education and blend it with International Baccalaureate (IB) standards, The British National Curriculum, or American Common Core standards. The ideal hybrid program will incorporate different education practices and draw on what works well from each model to create a wholly unique curriculum for that particular school. Often, schools that offer hybrid programs in Beijing place greater emphasis on bilingualism and Chinese culture than other international schools.

Who does it target?

A hybrid education program is applicable to students of all ages from 2-18 though in particular, hybrid programs are generally better suited toward parents who want their child to have a deeper understanding of Chinese language and culture while maintaining high standards of written and spoken English.

How is it applied?

A hybrid education model will look differently from school to school. In any case, collaboration between teachers and curriculum coordinators is essential to ensure high standards of planning and implementation. Let's take a program that combines the IB programme with the Chinese National Curriculum for example. A good hybrid program following the aforementioned model should have the following traits:

- Teachers working closely together at each grade level and discipline
- Ongoing professional development training for teachers
- Flexible framework that is adaptable to the needs of the students
- Threads of Chinese culture and identity integrated into unit and lesson planning

Why should parents consider it?

Students who attend a school with a hybrid model of education in Beijing can benefit from a deeper cultural understanding of China as well as fluency in Mandarin and English; a standout point when applying to university. Furthermore, the hybrid model provides students with a one of a kind education experience and can produce well-rounded and globally minded citizens.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

It's more important than ever for future generations to be able to participate in a multicultural, multilingual, and changing environment. The right hybrid model can equip students with the tools for success for a global world.

BIBS Grade 6 student Franda and Thomas Teng, math teacher

Chinese National Curriculum

The current Chinese educational system is based upon revisions to national education that followed the implementation of the Four Modernizations presented by Zhou Enlai in 1974. These four modernizations (to develop agriculture, industry, technology, and defense) are considered the four pillars of modern education in China.

Who does it target?

Parents who want their child to be fully immersed in a Chinese-language curriculum in order to understand local culture and emerge from the school system fully literate in Mandarin.

How is it applied?

Divided into a 6-3-3 system (six years of primary school, followed by three years each of junior and senior middle school), the Chinese education system relies heavily on public funding and the designation of "key schools," which receive greater portions of government funding.

Why should parents consider it?

Complete immersion in Mandarin ensures literacy and fluency in the language. Additionally most schools encourage respect for authority and work ethic through longer school hours and more homework.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

There are more than 100 million people learning Mandarin all over the world. Establishing a child's language and literacy in Mandarin early can provide them with an edge in their future careers. Foreign students who attend bilingual schools are also provided with cultural and social observation classes in order to better understand the national landscape before entering post-secondary schooling in China or the workforce.

Chinese National Curriculum Spotlight:

Beanstalk International Bilingual School (BIBS), Chinese National Curriculum Math and Chinese (In addition to the International Baccalaureate Primary Years Programme, the elementary school offers the Chinese National Curriculum in its math and Chinese courses across BIBS Upper East Side and Shunyi campuses.)

What are the strengths of the Chinese National Curriculum with regard to the math course?

Chinese math curriculum is systematic in that learning content for each grade keeps strict consistency in order to meet the needs of students from different age groups and levels. The requirement for learning varies depending on students' cognitive and psychological level. It drives their learning interests and provokes more insight which lays the foundation for their study and work later on. -Thomas Teng, BIBS Chinese math teacher

What was the most interesting project you worked on this year?

One of the most impressive math activities in Mr. Teng's class is the individual study circle. I learned a lot about the discovery and history of the circle, the concept of it and the knowledge of pi. I made a poster about the circle and presented it in class. I think this was very different from other learning activities because it motivated me to learn and I benefited a lot in return. - Franda, Grade 6

English National Curriculum Spotlight:

IGCSE Business Studies at Harrow International School of Beijing (Harrow Beijing)

What are the strengths of the English National Curriculum with regard to the business studies course?

The course is designed as a two-year program. As students progress, they are introduced to new ideas and concepts while continuing to use and reinforce previously learned concepts and skills. The course gives students a sound understanding of business and the ability to use knowledge and skills appropriately in the context of international markets and the United Kingdom. It allows for an enquiring, critical approach to distinguish between facts and opinion and evaluate qualitative and quantitative data, to help build arguments, and make informed judgments. Furthermore, it allows for an understanding of the dynamics of business activity and the related considerations of ethics and sustainability in business. - Shellie Gibbons, head of business and economics

What was the most interesting project you worked on this year?

For the Young Enterprise Competition business studies students had to come up with a business idea and pitch it to a group of judges. We had to design a poster, TV advertisement, and pitch. We learned about the 4Ps of marketing [Product, Price, Place, Promotion] and were able to apply the theory to the practical aspect of the competition. It made it much easier to understand marketing and finance theory. We held a preliminary competition in school and the students who made it through represented Harrow at the competition against five other schools. The competition helped us to develop our presentation skills. Having the opportunity to enter was one of the best experiences I've had here at Harrow; being able to put theory into practice and represent your school is an amazing feeling. - Prudence Johnson-Hill, Year 11

The English National Curriculum

The English National Curriculum was developed by the British government for standard use in England, Wales, and Northern Ireland. It is used in over 30,000 schools in the UK and overseas. This education system is characterized by a broad, well-rounded education that narrows in focus after Year 11. The National Curriculum targets students 3-18 years of age. They are divided into "Key Stages" that cover early childhood education, primary and secondary school:

- Key Stage 0: Ages 3-5 (also known as Early Years)
- Key Stage 1: Ages 5-7 (Year 1-2)
- Key Stage 2: Ages 7-11 (Year 3-6)
- Key Stage 3: Ages 11-14 (Year 7-9)
- Key Stage 4: Ages 14-16 (Year 10-11)
- Key Stage 5: Ages 16-18 (Year 12-13, collectively known as Sixth Form)

How is it applied?

Primary school students are assessed at the end of Key Stage 1, 2, and 3 on core subjects using a scale of 1 to 8. Based on tests and teacher assessments, these assessments are known as "SATS" or Standard Assessment Tasks (not to be confused with the American SAT, a standardized test used for college admissions in the US).

At the end of Key Stage 4, students can sit up to ten subjects at a series of national exams known as the GCSEs (General Certificate of Secondary Education) with some exams and coursework completed in Year 10 and in the early stages of Year 11.

At the end of Key Stage 5, students can take the GCSE Advanced Level exams, commonly known as A-levels. A-levels are a graduated system composed of AS levels (Year 12) and A2 levels (Year 13). Students cannot move on to A2 levels if they do not pass their AS levels. The norm is to sit four or five AS levels in Year 12, then carry forward three subjects to A2 level in Year 13.

Most international schools offer the IGCSE administered by University of Cambridge International Examinations – essentially the international equivalent of the GCSE. The system offers more than 70 study subjects, with an emphasis on English fluency and cultural awareness.

Why should parents consider it?

The English National Curriculum sets out a highly structured set of standards, enabling educators to clearly understand the learning outcomes expected at each stage and to measure how a child is doing within the system. In Sixth Form, A-levels give students the freedom to choose their areas of study and thus focus on their strengths and interests. A-levels allow students to study the subjects they potentially want to pursue in university, allowing time in the work week for wider reading and additional research that can lead to a deeper understanding of their areas of interest.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

The British education system is well-recognized and accepted all over the world. A-levels are the standard qualification for universities in the UK and help students focus on preferred subjects before applying to university. They're also generally accepted in the US and Europe as well as former Commonwealth countries like Canada and Australia.

However, critics of the National Curriculum say that it is largely prescriptive, lacking flexibility and creativity. Because teachers must "teach to the test," students do not adequately develop their problem-solving and critical thinking skills. In the UK, state school results are published and institutions are ranked against each other, often leading to undue pressure on administrators, teachers, and students.

International Baccalaureate (IB)

Formerly known as the IBO, the International Baccalaureate (IB) is a non-profit educational foundation headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland. It was founded in 1968 and is administered by a board of governors and six permanent committees that handle policy and best governance practices. The IB is divided into three programs that can be applied individually or as a whole: the Primary Years Programme or PYP (ages 3-12), the Middle Years Programme or MYP (ages 11-16), and the Diploma Programme or IBDP (ages 16-19). Institutions that are authorized to offer one or more of these programs are known as IB World Schools. According to the official website, there are over one million IB students in more than 140 countries around the world.

Who does it target?

As a whole, the IB's programs target students 3-19 years of age.

How is it applied?

All three of the IB's programs share the following traits:

- They require study across a broad range of subjects.

- They emphasize language learning
- They encourage interdisciplinary learning
- They include a community service requirement

Each program has its own curriculum; the IBDP is probably the best known. Over two years, students must take six courses drawn from the following subject groups: arts, experimental sciences, language acquisition, studies in language and literature, individuals and society, and mathematics and computer science. Normally, half of these subjects are higher-level courses (240 teaching hours) and the other half are standard-level courses (150 teaching hours). Other hallmarks of the IBDP include Theory of Knowledge (TOK), "Creativity, Service, and Action" (CAS), and the extended essay. International Baccalaureate (IB) TOK is a compulsory course that focuses on critical thinking and the nature of knowledge. CAS reflects the belief that students should pursue activities outside the classroom. The extended essay is a 4,000-word paper designed to prepare students for undergraduate university work. IBDP students are graded on a scale from 1 to 7 (7 being the highest). They can also gain up to three extra points for their combined results on TOK and the extended essay, bringing the maximum total grade to 45 points. The IB diploma is awarded to students who obtain at least 24 points and satisfy their requirements in CAS. In general, about 80 percent of students obtain the diploma after being examined; fewer than 1 percent achieve a perfect score.

Samantha Kwek, Year 13, and Gareth Evans, global perspectives teacher at YCIS

Why should parents consider it?

The IB has a 43-year history of high-quality international education. IB World Schools go through a rigorous authorization and evaluation process and IB teachers participate in a variety of professional development events. The IB has a distinct focus on international education, making it one of the most popular – and natural – choices for expat families in Beijing.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

The IB diploma is accepted by over 2,000 universities in 75 countries. In addition, IB provides students with an international skill set, including knowledge of a second language, advanced critical thinking skills, dedication to community service, and the ability to appreciate different cultures.

International Baccalaureate Spotlight: Global Politics at Yew Chung International School of Beijing (YCIS Beijing)

What are the strengths of the IB curriculum with regard to the global politics course?

One of the great strengths of the IB Diploma curriculum is that it has the concept of global citizenship at its core. The core unit of the course is called "People, Power, and Politics" – as I always tell the students: politics is people, and we recognize that "globally" includes communities, groups, and individuals. Global Politics as a subject, based on a variety of disciplines in the social sciences and humanities, specifically builds on that concept and on other parts of the IB Learner Profile by getting the students to study the underlying ways in which the wider world around them actually works day-to-day. We are passing on a great many problems to the next generation; this course strives to give the students a greater understanding of how such events occur, and, very importantly, the language with which to discuss them so that they can critically engage with the challenges they will face as adults. - Gareth Evans, global perspectives teacher

What was the most interesting project you've worked on this year?

Last summer I joined a summer program in India, mainly in Macleod and Dharmasala. I learned new things I never thought I would, especially about refugees and the living conditions in more rural areas. In Macleod, I talked for hours with my home-stay father and learned so much about Tibet as well as about him as a Tibetan that has never been to Tibet. He told me his life story and it reminded me of the countless conversations that we had during global politics classes about refugees and their grave situation. Those conversations in class were obviously always a little abstract, but this experience gave me real-world insight. What I learned reflected reality onto our academic studies. - Samantha Kwek, Year 13

Reggio Emilia Spotlight: Art at House of Knowledge International School and Kindergarten (HoK)

What are the strengths of the Reggio Emilia curricula with regard to art?

Each student has the chance to use their individual character, ideas, and fantasies to inspire their artwork. The numerous and varied materials available for the children to choose from motivates them to create according to their imagination and make their artwork any way they see fit. As a result, each piece of artwork from the children is unique and reveals their inner dreams, experiences, and curiosities. Reggio educators strive to encourage this creative, individualistic feeling and support the children any way we can. - Sandy Wobbe, lead teacher

What was the most interesting artistic project you worked on this year?

I enjoyed making the German Inter City Express train because it can travel very fast, and I really like that. - Vincent Chen-Sieling, German Middle Age

Reggio Emilia

Reggio Emilia is an early childhood philosophy named after the city of the same name in northern Italy, where communities in the surrounding villages sought a way to rebuild society after World War II. Under the leadership of founder and educator Loris Malaguzzi, Reggio Emilia evolved into a parent-led approach that spread all over the world. Malaguzzi believed that children learn through the “hundred languages” of words, movement, painting, drawing, sculpting, shadow play, music, theater, and more. Reggio Emilia is all about relationships, including the child’s relationship with family, teachers, society, and their environment. This educational approach is self-guided; kids exert a degree of control over their own learning, learn about the world through all five senses, develop meaningful relationships with other children, and have the freedom to express themselves in various ways.

Who does it target?

Reggio Emilia focuses on early childhood education (ages 0-6).

How is it applied?

Reggio Emilia does not have a governing organization, accreditation system, or set curriculum. According to the North American Reggio Emilia Alliance (NAREA), Reggio Emilia is a set of “community-constructed values that have been and are continuously being translated into high-quality early childhood practices.” The main assessment method for Reggio Emilia is observation. Teachers track the child’s progress by collecting information over long time periods through photos, notes, videos, works of art, and conversations. In Beijing, schools tend to combine Reggio Emilia with other educational philosophies. House of Knowledge International Kindergarten has the strongest Reggio Emilia influence but its curriculum also borrows aspects of Montessori and traditional Confucian theory. Though an IB World School, the Western Academy of Beijing’s early childhood center offers a Reggio Emilia-inspired program.

Why should parents consider it?

Since Reggio Emilia revolves around family and community, parents are a crucial part of this approach. They are considered the child’s first teacher, and are valued as partners, collaborators, and advocates. As a result, many parents extend the Reggio Emilia philosophy to the home.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

As in Montessori, Reggio Emilia seeks to develop skills for lifelong learning. Reggio children are able to step into a new curriculum or subject with the drive and competency to acquire knowledge. In class, students are not given any answers; teachers prompt them with questions that allow them to form their own conclusions. Students apply critical thinking skills and have the confidence to ask others for help.

Montessori

Founded by Dr. Maria Montessori (1870- 1952) the Montessori motto is "Help me do it by myself." This approach is founded on the belief that every child should be respected as an individual and allowed to learn at their own pace within the prepared environment of a classroom. The Montessori philosophy acknowledges that a child's curiosity and interest fuel their drive toward competence, allowing them to learn and progress at their own pace. Montessori education aims to foster intelligent thinking, independence, self-esteem, problem-solving skills, and social aptitude.

Though there are several Montessori societies worldwide, the term "Montessori" itself is not trademarked. That's why it is crucial for parents to visit prospective schools. The more prominent societies, like the American Montessori Society (AMS), formulate their own standards and accredit schools.

How is it applied?

Globally, the age of Montessori students varies widely from infancy to adulthood (0-18 years). The majority of schools in Beijing tend to focus on early childhood education (such as Etonkids and Children's House), but MSB offer Montessori-style education for kids up to age 12.

A typical Montessori classroom features multi-age groupings, uninterrupted blocks of work time, guided activity choices, and specially-designed learning materials. The curriculum focuses on five basic areas: practical life, sensorial, language, math, and culture. Kids progress from simple to complex tasks, all while fulfilling their natural curiosity.

Montessori teachers guide their students. There are no assessments or grading systems; progress is tracked through observation, record-keeping, and self-reflection. There is also no such thing as failure since teachers present each child with a choice of tasks and a variety of difficulties.

Why should parents consider it?

Education experts agree that the most important period in a child's development is between infancy and age 6. Dr. Montessori believed that kids at this age had an "absorbent" quality, like a sponge. The idea is that the proper guidance and stimulation will allow them to form patterns for the rest of their lives.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

As self-directed learners, Montessori students gain transferrable skills that can be used throughout their lives. The core values are independence, self-esteem, and cooperation. Many Montessori schools in Beijing use a combination of educational approaches. For example, the core curriculum at MSB includes aspects of Montessori, the IB Primary Years Program, and the British education system.

Montessori Spotlight: International Montessori School of Beijing (MSB)

What are the strengths of the Montessori curricula with regard to music?

The music program at MSB introduces the children to the joy of learning music, and fosters an inner curiosity about and positive, questioning attitude toward learning music. The environment in the music studio and the themes we introduce change across the grades, but the overall goals of the program remain stable. We promote self-confidence in performing in front of an audience, develop initiative, concentration, and persistence, and build a strong foundation of music appreciation for future growth.

- Charles Dujat des Allimes, music director

What was the most interesting musical project you worked on this year?

I have really enjoyed learning to play the ukulele. It's a really fun instrument. Some of the songs I've learned to play included "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" and "Chanda Mama". Recently, I also learned to play "Jingle Bells", which I performed live with my schoolmates in the MSB lobby just before winter break.

- Chiara, Grade 4

Multiple Intelligences

Harvard University professor Dr. Howard Gardner first proposed the Multiple Intelligences theory in his 1983 book Frames of Mind. He wrote that humans are made up of multiple intelligences, the main eight intelligences being linguistic, logical-mathematical, spatial, bodily kinesthetic, musical, interpersonal, intrapersonal, and naturalist. At the core of this theory is the recognition that children think and learn differently and that intelligence can be expressed in a multitude of ways.

How is it applied?

Schools teaching a Multiple Intelligences-style curriculum use different methodologies, exercises, and activities to reach all students. There is no single preferred model and individual schools have implemented the theory in different ways. What they do have in common, however, is a multi-faceted approach to teaching incorporating each of the eight major intelligences. In a typical model, the instructional objective should be linked to words, numbers or logic, pictures, music, the body, the natural world, social interaction, and/or personal experience. Here's an overview of the eight major intelligences:

- Linguistic: The ability to use language to express what's on our minds and to understand other people (e.g. word games, spelling, reading books, and looking at pictures)
- Logical-mathematical: The ability to think logically and to use and manipulate numbers, quantities, and operations (e.g. science experiments, math, Lego, and construction)
- Spatial: The ability to represent the spatial world in one's mind (e.g. art and craft activities)
- Musical: The ability to perceive and understand patterns of sound as well as creating and communicating meaning from sound (e.g. playing instruments, listening to music, composition, singing)
- Bodily-kinesthetic: The ability to use fine and gross motor abilities (e.g. moving to music, playing dress-up, puppet shows)
- Interpersonal: The ability to understand people and relationships (e.g. team games and activities)
- Intrapersonal: The ability to understand oneself, one's thoughts and feelings (e.g. working alone and independently)
- Naturalist: The ability to understand and work with the natural world and the environment (e.g. gardening, looking at insects)

Why should parents consider it?

A curriculum that incorporates the Multiple Intelligences theory is one that strives to develop children's full potential in a dynamic, play-based, and supportive environment. The teaching methods focus on the children by educating them according to their individual abilities and needs. The activities planned by the teachers are more student-centered than traditional academic subject activities.

How well does this education system prepare students for the real world?

Children are taught to become self-confident, to get along well with others, to be problem solvers, to make good choices, and to see themselves as children with good ideas – all of which are valuable life skills.

Multiple Intelligences Spotlight: Ivy Academy

What are the strengths of the Multiple Intelligences curriculum with regard to language?

In terms of language, when the children in a classroom are all over the language spectrum, it becomes more effective for the entire class to aid each child by using their strongest intelligences as their own advantage. All children in a classroom may not have similar speaking or understanding abilities, and this is acceptable since they all thrive at their own pace, using one or more of the eight intelligences included in the Multiple Intelligences Theory. When an educator is able to understand which intelligences a child naturally uses more, the language barrier disappears and there is room for enriched learning. - Phektra Keo, English assistant teacher

What did you like most about learning English this year?

I like our Reading Workshop a lot. We do many things other than just reading. I learn ways to make what I read easier, like making pictures in my mind and putting together things that are the same. It's fun sharing ideas with my teacher and my classmates. I especially enjoy working with a group to make our vocabulary posters. I think the best part is each of us gets to have our own book, because we get to read it to mommy and daddy at home. -Alice, Pre-K1 class

House of Knowledge International School & Kindergarten (HoK) 好思之家三语国际学校及幼儿园

House of Knowledge is an independent school established in Beijing in 2007. HoK believes that tomorrow's leaders need an excellent foundation, cultivated in an international environment that is both caring and challenging. HoK's unique Reggio Emilia inspired kindergarten curriculum trains students to acquire critical thinking and collaboration skills by teaching them how to "learn to learn." At HoK's elementary school, students choose between an English/Chinese program and German/English program, depending on what curriculum and languages the student wants to acquire. Furthermore, students have the option of acquiring a third language as part of the daily program. Our mission is to provide a sustainable child-driven education that engages students in active learning, with a multi-sensory approach that allows children the freedom to explore. Languages are taught through "content based instruction", which is an approach to language instruction that integrates the presentation of topics or tasks from subject classes (e.g math, science) within the context of teaching second foreign language. The modest size of the elementary school allows for an intimate child-centered environment where students thrive.

Favorite Family Restaurant

Crystal Jade at Indigo Mall. Our girls love it there, and there are usually other kids around too. They have high chairs and the food is served quickly, which is key for little ones. We are huge fans of dumplings, and their soup dumplings are amazing!

Day Trip

We went to Longqing Gorge in the fall and loved it. Our school helps to organize trips on the weekends, and we have joined a few.

Favorite Place to Shop for Yourself

We splurge on imported goods at Jenny Wang's at Pinnacle Plaza and BHG at Euro Plaza.

Best Place to Shop for the Kids

Taobao or jd.com for kids' stuff. We are fortunate that our children come equipped with a year-long supply of clothing from my mother-in-law.

New Discoveries

Seeing shows. We took our daughters to Disney on Ice, we went to see Phantom of the Opera, and we'll be going to see The Nutcracker this month.

Weekend Activities

We often spend one day closer to home running errands at Shine City, Euro Plaza, or Pinnacle Plaza. The other weekend day, we jump on the subway and go somewhere.

Family Rituals

Weekend Skype calls back home. We try to make sure we see both sets of grandparents every weekend.

Best Spot for Parents' Date Night

We like to catch a movie and a meal. We've been to Solana, Indigo, and Shine City.

Best Place to Play Indoors

We went to the China Science and Technology Museum on a field trip. There are tons of interactive exhibits, dinosaur bones, and lots of 3D/4D/Imax movie options. Some of the signs are only in Chinese, but they have worked to have English signs too.

Where Do the Kids Beg You to Go?

The indoor play place at Indigo Mall. They love the hand-crank train on the top.
